	from authorities/institutions in other countries for bidding for overseas projects. Generally, the international banks take a period of 30—45 days to make commitments for funded/non-funded facilities OCCI's clearance is required for a new entrant in the civil construction export market and not for individual bid, and it is a one time clearance.
4. There is need to empower the bank or consortia for banks to scrutinise the proposals.	Scrutiny of the proposals by Commercial Banks alone is not considered adequate for proper credit assessment.
5. Indian companies are not in a position to provide soft credit terms to clients.	India is not a capital exporting country and it is not feasible to support projects with soft credits, but for exceptional contracts negotiated on political terms by Government of India.
6. The project terms, including agency commission, site offices being opened purchase of equipment from third country and guarantees has to be cleared by RBI.	Prior approval of RBI is not essential for any of these items.
7. RBI and EXIM Bank expect the projects to be self financing and the overseas borrowing can only be availed up to 15% of the contract value that too with previous RBI approval.	These are the general guidelines of RBI, but need based requirement for higher amounts are also considered and approved by RBI on merits.
8. 100 per cent tax break as in the case of other exports.	This proposal has been examined by Government but it has not been found possible to accept the same.
